

London Jewellery School moves to trendy Brick Lane - brighter studios for an even better student experience

The London Jewellery School is excited to be able to announce a move to new studios next to trendy Brick Lane from September this year.

The newly renovated studios boast something the current premises are missing – natural light with large windows in all three teaching spaces. This means we can continue to deliver our wide range of jewellery classes in an even better environment.

Plus the new premises in the E1 Business Centre on Whitechapel Road are only a minute's walk from Aldgate East underground station, and close to plenty of other tube and mainline stations making it even easier to reach us.

The new location also means LJS is maintaining its tradition of teaching jewellery skills in locations with great jewellery heritage. The new studios are just metres away from the site of Black Lion Yard, once London's second key jewellery quarter. The street, demolished in the early 70s, was known as "Hatton Garden of the East End" and was home to a large number of jewellers and watchmakers.

The area still offers plenty to inspire the current generation of jewellery makers with a strong art and design culture. The Whitechapel Gallery is almost next door to the new studios, the area is also home to The Sir John Cass Faculty of Art, Architecture and Design as well as lots of exciting design led shops off nearby Commercial Street, in Spitalfields Market and at the Old Truman Brewery complex on Brick Lane.

LJS will continue to offer more than 85 jewellery courses, private tuition and jewellery bench rental across three teaching studios at our new Whitechapel base as well as continually looking at out students' needs to introduce new classes and services. For example, we will shortly be launching a second more advanced five day silver course including fold forming, cold connections and more advanced stone setting techniques, look out for more details very soon.

The LJS team is looking forward to seeing many old and new students at its new base and continue to bring professional jewellery skills to even more people.

ABOUT LONDON JEWELLERY SCHOOL

London Jewellery School is the UK's largest independent jewellery training. With over 100 classes to choose from, more than 20 world-class jewellery tutors and three fully-equipped jewellery studios there is something at LJS for everyone.

Our motto is that 'everyone can make jewellery' which we truly believe. Our classes are suitable for all abilities from complete beginners through to professional jewellers. We run classes on weekdays, evenings and weekends to suit all timetables and prices start from just £50.

LJS was set up in 2009 by jewellery designer Jessica Rose who is now the school Director. It began with just one class a month from a community hall in Dulwich, south London and within a few years has grown to be London's most popular jewellery training venue.

London Jewellery School www.londonjewelleryschool.co.uk

LJS is also home to the Diploma in Creative Jewellery www.jewellery-diploma.co.uk.

For more information contact marketing co-ordinator Bronagh Miskelly at press@londonjewelleryschool.co.uk